

Is the opposite of success failure?

~From Success to Great Success:

Things to Think About in the Second Semester

What would you think if you heard, "There is nothing in this world but success and failure"? Generally speaking, I would be quite surprised if anyone would "agree" with this statement. Most people would probably think, "Of course not!"

So then, what does the word "failure" mean? Let's say, I practiced a leg spread forward roll on the mat, but I couldn't do it. That's a failure. I practiced English spelling many times, but I couldn't get a perfect score on my it. This is a failure. I tried to be friendly with my friends, but somehow, I made them angry. That's a failure. Some of you might be thinking like this.

But this is not true. It is only you who are thinking that these are mistakes. For example, suppose I go to take dance lessons. Of course, I have never practiced dancing before. And let's say I ended up quitting after a week. Obviously, there is no way that I can dance like the third graders at the sports festival. There is no way that I will be able to take the same fancy steps as someone who has been practicing hard. At this point, some people might be disappointed and say "I can't dance like that person," or "I'm terrible at dancing," and they consider this a setback or failure and become more and more negative. Many people, including myself are like this. How about you?

This is an emotion which is born from "comparing" yourself with others. This is because you compare yourself with people who are good at what they do or who have been practicing for years. What happens if you compare this to yourself in the past? I was a complete beginner in dancing, and in three days my steps became smoother; in one week, my body will move to the rhythm than before; This is an undeniable "success". You have progressed and became better than yourself in the past, who started out from nothing. I did a lot of English vocabulary practice, but I didn't get a perfect score. But I learned far more English words than I did before I started studying. This is because you took the action.

You tried to get along with your friend but it didn't work out. But you tried to be friendly, and you surely started to think and consider people's feelings more than before. In other words, those who act will benefit greatly and this will lead to their success.

Now, everyone, how would you like to be by the end of this year? And what can you do to take it from success to great success?

Train accident emergency drill September 9th (F)

On First Aid Day, a rescue and transport drill for railroad accidents by the Oku-Noto Regional Office and the Oku-Noto Regional First Aid Team. Third-year students played the role of injured passengers and learned how to be rescued. The tense atmosphere was very meaningful for the third-year students.

Good Manner Campaign

Many members of the community participated in the event. We would also like to thank the members of the Student Guidance Committee of the Nurturing Society for taking to the streets to call for the event. Thank you very much.

Let's bow and greet!

Oku-Noto freshman tournament 9/10(Sa)11(Su)

This was the first official tournament for the new 1st and 2nd year teams. All the clubs put forth their best effort. Especially the baseball team! They brought home the championship flag with their muddy uniforms and their smiles.

Second period student council election on 9/14(W)

The second-year students ran for student-body elections. They all expressed enthusiasm to make a better school.

Traffic safety class September 16th (F)

With the support of JA Ozora and the Wajima Police Station, a bicycle traffic safety class was held on the school grounds. A stuntman was used to demonstrate a traffic accident. The students were able to experience the horrible reality of an accident and understand that it could happen to them. Thank you very much for giving us this precious opportunity.

Hometown learning

< 3rd grade grape picking >
September 21st (W)

The school was closed due to a typhoon and the event was postponed for a day, but the next day the weather was fine and we were able to harvest the grapes which will become wine five years from now. We look forward to seeing the wine, which will be a gift from the town for the coming-of-age ceremony in five years.
